

The first sheet carries the summary. Two ledgers, one clerk, and a standing disagreement that resolves itself every afternoon without anyone intervening.

The second sheet carries the detail, which nobody reads. It is kept because the summary is only believed by people who know the detail exists.